others—only to fail her.

After Houdini died, his widow's hair turned white, and the world which was burned white, and the world which was so colorful and beautiful while he lived turned drab. For 35 years she traveled with the world's greatest magician, sharing his secrets, aiding his work.

On her slim finger she wears the wide band of gold that Houdini gave her when she was a brille, and inside the ring she wears a tiny picture of her husband. She has a wealth of memories, which encircle the globe, for where civilized man lives there went Howdini to startle with his magic.
